ABOUT GAMBLING

It's time to get real.

Across Massachusetts, problem gambling threatens the health of our residents. That's why we believe it's time to get real about gambling.

Everyone has a role to play

Getting real about gambling means addressing gambling in all its forms. It means having frank conversations about the impact of gambling and why some of us — especially people of color — are at a higher risk for problem gambling. It means taking steps to support priority populations, build community resilience, and provide everyone the resources to protect themselves and the people they love.

It's our responsibility. And the time to do it is now.

Who we are

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Office of Problem Gambling Services ensures a comprehensive and integrated public health approach to problem gambling by using data to inform initiatives, engage communities, and ensure cultural intelligence and humility.
