Colleges conference showdowns pack a day's worth of watching

Eddie Timanus

USA TODAY

A full Week 5 college football Saturday features marquee contests all day and well into the night Sept. 27.

For the sake of brevity, we've limited ourselves to the seven most compelling matchups for this viewers' guide. But as usual, we certainly allow that there are plenty of other games on the schedule more than capable of producing surprises and close finishes. Once again, keep one eye on the scoreboard, one hand on the remote, and enjoy.

With all that out of the way, let us get into the nuts and bolts, starting in prime time.

No. 5 Oregon at No. 2 Penn State

Time/TV: 7:30 p.m. ET, NBC.

Why watch: This Big Ten blockbuster has been circled on the calendar all month, as we finally get to see if the Nittany Lions are worthy of their lofty pre-season billing. Oregon, to be fair, hasn't been challenged much either, though the Ducks did get an earlier taste of conference travel at Northwestern. Oregon QB Dante Moore has the offense humming, averaging just over 10 yards per pass attempt spreading the ball among a slew of big-play targets like WR Dakorien Moore and TE Kenyon Sadiq. Penn State DE Dani Dennis-Sutton and LB Tony Rojas will try to make his job difficult. Nittany Lions QB Drew Allar hasn't had to test the deep waters much, as RBs Kaytron Allen and Nicholas Singleton have also picked up where they left off last season. Allar will probably need to stretch the field more this week to keep Ducks LB Bryce Boettcher at bay.

Why it could disappoint: We'd be surprised if it does, but unexpected things happen in this sport all the time. When these teams last met in the 2024 Big Ten championship game, Penn State fell into an early hole and couldn't quite make it all the way back. That seems unlikely to happen here in Happy Valley, but the Ducks shouldn't be overwhelmed by the atmosphere either.

No. 16 Alabama at No. 3 Georgia

Time/TV: 7:30 p.m. ET, ABC.

Why watch: One can only hope this showdown of recent national powers comes close to matching the drama of some past encounters. The stakes might not be as high this time, though the Crimson Tide certainly want to avoid taking a second "L" on their ledger this early in the campaign. The Bulldogs for their part are happy to have gotten out of Tennessee unscathed a couple of weeks ago and now look to defend their home turf. The Georgia defense wasn't exactly lights out in Knoxville, which could bode well for Alabama QB Ty Simpson and his most dependable WR Germie Bernard. Chris Cole and the Bulldogs LB corps have had some success on blitzes, but more pressure is needed from the front line. UGa QB Gunner Stockton's most dangerous weapon is WR Zachariah Branch, who will be monitored at all times by Crimson Tide DB Bray Hubbard.

Why it could disappoint: It will depend on how the Alabama lines hold up. If Georgia dominates in the trenches the way Florida State did, the Tide are in for a long night. But a back-and-forth treat seems more likely, as the Bulldogs haven't consistently imposed their will either.

No. 4 LSU at No. 11 Ole Miss

Time/TV: 3:30 p.m. ET, ABC.

Why watch: In most weeks, this clash of unbeaten in the SEC would be the undisputed headliner. When all is said and done, it might prove to be the most consequential, as both teams still have plenty of challenges ahead and would very much like to have this one in the win column. The stronger units for both teams will be on the field when Ole Miss has possession. The Rebels have moved the ball effectively with either QB Austin Simmons or Trinidad Chambliss at the controls. Chambliss should continue to start for now, and workhorse RB Kewan Lacy is a big part of all packages who will receive extra attention from LSU LB Harold Perkins. The Tigers haven't been as flashy, though they've faced stiffer resistance. QB Garrett Nussmeier and RB Caden Durham might find more openings against the Rebels, but DT Zxavian Harris is hard to move in the middle.

Why it could disappoint: A couple of possibilities come to mind. Either the LSU offense won't be able to keep up, or the Tigers defense will take charge immediately and turn the game into a slog. We suspect, however, that there will be enough momentum changes on the field to keep everyone interested.

No. 1 Ohio State at Washington

Time/TV: 3:30 p.m. ET, CBS.

Why watch: This is the Buckeyes' only visit to the Big Ten's West Coast enclave, and while it isn't Oregon or Southern Cal, it might not be a walk in the park. The Huskies handled the nonconference portion of their schedule with relative ease and are now ready to see how they stack up among the league's upper tier. Washington QB Demond Williams Jr. has been efficient thus far, though having RB Jonah Coleman with him in the backfield has certainly helped. If they can keep Caleb Downs and the Buckeyes' excellent safety group busy, there might be opportunities to stretch the field. Ohio State QB Julian Sayin did enough in his first major test against Texas and has since gotten in a couple of tune-ups. He will want to get standout WR Jeremiah Smith involved early and often, though Huskies DB Alex McLaughlin will assist with coverage.

Why it could disappoint: The Buckeyes had last week off, while the Huskies were in an Apple Cup fight with Washington State that took a bit longer to secure than they might have liked. Beyond that, though, it might be that Washington's rebuild is not that close to where Ohio State is in the sport's pecking order. We should know fairly soon if that is the case.

No. 12 Indiana at Iowa

Time/TV: 3:30 p.m. ET, Peacock.

Why watch: The Hoosiers must put last week's strong statement win in the rearview as they hit the road to face the Hawkeyes, who had a solid result themselves at Rutgers in their Big Ten opener. LB Jaden Harrell and the Iowa defense buttoned down in the second half after a rough start last week. They can't afford a repeat of that formula against dynamic Indiana QB Fernando Mendoza and his deep stable of backs. The good news for the Hawkeyes was the improved output by QB Mark Gronowski and the offense, but LB Aiden Fisher and the Hoosiers' front could be harder to solve. It wouldn't come as a shock if the kicking game played a major role, with weapons like Iowa's Kaden Wetjen or the Hoosiers' D'Angelo Ponds capable of a big return at any time.

Why it could disappoint: Even with Iowa's offensive upgrade, it still isn't really equipped to mount a multi-score comeback if Indiana should grab the lead early. But if the Hawkeyes can make it a battle of field position, there could be fourth-quarter drama.

No. 22 Southern Cal at No. 23 Illinois

Time/TV: noon ET, Fox.

Why watch: After cracking the US LBM Coaches Poll for the first time this season, the Trojans put that ranking on the line with this road trip. The Fighting Illini, meanwhile, are in desperate need of a reset after being thoroughly humbled by Indiana. Illinois QB Luke Altmyer didn't have much time to operate last week as his offensive line was constantly overwhelmed. That kind of physicality has not been a defining trait for USC in recent years, but LB Eric Gentry does give the Trojans a veteran presence in the middle. USC QB Jayden Maiava has nine scoring throws without a pick and is getting solid ground support from RBs Waymond Jordan and Eli Sanders. LB Gabe Jacas and the Illinois front must regroup quickly.

Why it could disappoint: Following a late-night game in its home time zone a week ago, USC faces a body-clock adjustment with what will feel like a morning kickoff. Will it matter? Probably not, but it may be worth watching early.

Arizona at No. 13 Iowa State

Time/TV: 7 p.m. ET, ESPN.

Why watch: The Cyclones got an early jump-start in Big 12 play a month ago. They finally return to league competition in Ames as they welcome the Wildcats, who are still something of a mystery team but have shown signs of improvement after going 4-8 in 2024. Iowa State is coming off a needed open date, which could translate to a quick start for QB Rocco Becht and RB Carson Hansen. The Wildcats, however, are also rested, and DB Genesis Smith and Company don't surrender many long gainers. Arizona QB Noah Fifita has six scoring passes without an interception, though his completion percentage has dipped slightly to 59% this season. He'll be up against a deep Cyclones secondary featuring Jamison Patton.

Why it could disappoint: It probably won't. Iowa State doesn't exactly blow opponents out of the water even while winning. And, like the Cyclones, Arizona was also involved in a one-score game with Kansas State, though that one didn't count in the conference standings. It probably won't be a track meet, but it appears to be a close matchup on paper.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Six-pack of games you can't miss this week

Eddie Timanus
USA TODAY

October has arrived, which means conference play is now in full swing in college football. The Week 6 slate isn't quite as jam-packed with marquee contests as the most recent menu was, but there are still plenty of juicy tidbits to keep us entertained on Saturday Oct. 4.

Our weekly viewers' guide to the most important and potentially compelling matchups will begin, as it often does, in SEC country. The lineup also features a prime-time rivalry showdown, a clash of unbeaten in the Lone Star State, and a meeting of 2024 College Football Playoff participants trying to work their way back.

No. 17 Vanderbilt at No. 11 Alabama

Time/TV: 3:30 p.m. ET, ABC.

Why watch: The words "Vanderbilt" and "playoffs" don't usually appear in the same sentence, which is why Commodores QB Diego Pavia's bold pronouncement heading into the season caused such a stir. He and his Vandy teammates now have the chance to back up the notion that they are indeed contenders to make the field of 12. They did, after all, take down the Crimson Tide a year ago, but of course Alabama is well aware of that. Alabama for its part is very much back in the picture after last week's win at Georgia, though again, the Tide did that last year as well, then had a rough second half of the season. Pavia has certainly done his part for Vandy, accounting for 15 total TDs while making excellent use of TE Eli Stowers and RB Sedrick Alexander. His mobility could be an issue for the Tide defensive front, which will likely need backing from DB Bray Hubbard. Alabama QB Ty Simpson has also been hot since the opening loss to Florida State. WR Ryan Williams is a constant big-play threat, though his hands have let him down at times. Expect to see Commodores DB C.J. Heard in the vicinity of the ball often.

Why it could disappoint: This year's Alabama squad isn't built to simply show up and coast to victory. The Tide might still do so, but the Commodores would have to help them by giving the ball away. This feels more like it's going to be another wild ride – possibly not to the tune of 40-35 like last season's encounter in Nashville but points should again be plentiful.

No. 3 Miami at No. 19 Florida State

Time/TV: 7:30 p.m. ET, ABC.

Why watch: The anticipated top-10 matchup didn't materialize, but that hardly reduces the hype level as the ACC's Sunshine State showdown gets the prime-time treatment. The urgency might be dialed up higher for the Seminoles, who must avoid a second conference loss in succession, but the Hurricanes won't be feeling charitable toward their archrivals. Seminoles QB Thomas Castellanos isn't shy about taking off, but he's been receiving considerable punishment of late as a result. With Miami DE Rueben Bain eager to mete out more of it, he might want to let RB Gavin Sawchuk do the heavy lifting in the ground game. Hurricanes QB Carson Beck and his long-ball threats were largely held in check in their last outing against Florida, but RB Mark Fletcher helped with some tough yards. He'll likely be needed again, as DBs Ja'Bril Rawls and Jerry Wilson will be actively patrolling the Florida State secondary.

Why it could disappoint: Neither team has been immune to the turnover bug, so it's conceivable that one could find itself digging out of an early hole. Both offenses are equipped to stage a comeback should that occur, but a close contest throughout is more probable.

No. 14 Texas Tech at Houston

Time/TV: 7 p.m. ET, ESPN.

Why watch: The Cougars, perhaps the quietest unbeaten squad in the power conferences, will be quiet no more if they can topple the Red Raiders, who are among the early favorites in the wide-open Big 12. Houston had to work harder than it wanted to get out with a victory at winless Oregon State last week, but QB Conner Weigman made the plays when needed late. He'll want to get the offense moving a bit quicker this time, but Texas Tech LB Jacob Rodriguez might have something to say about that. The Red Raiders should be rested after their impressive victory at Utah two weeks ago. QB Behren Morton is expected to start after leaving that game early with a neck injury, but the strong performance of freshman backup Will Hammond should give the team confidence should Morton experience complications. WR Coy Eakin and TE

I've always enjoyed it." Brandt Snedeker, who will be making his sixth appearance at the Sanderson Farms Championships, echoed a similar sentiment, likening his time in Jackson to his upbringing in Nashville, Tennessee. "It's fun to be back, and I love being out (here)," Snedeker said. "Growing up in the South, getting to play a golf course like this is really, really special." Snedeker also noted the importance of the community turning out for the tournament. "This is a big golfing community, and they come out in full support of us, and it's fun to see," he said. "Coming to markets like this, that they're probably under-served when it comes to professional sports, you can be able to come out here and put a first-class event on is really special." Beau Hossler, the 2024 runner-up, also had complimentary things to say about the "Southern hospitality" offered emerged as another weapon, giving Gophers LBs Devon Williams and Maverick Baranowski more to think about.

Why it could disappoint: If this is the week the Buckeyes offense breaks out of its first-quarter funk, things could be decided in short order. Minnesota will have to be nearly perfect, which it has not always been when playing away from home.

Mississippi State at No. 5 Texas A&M

Time/TV: 7:30 p.m. ET, SECN.

Why watch: While the Bulldogs will almost certainly exceed their projected last-place finish in the SEC, last week's near upset of Tennessee was still a major missed opportunity. They can't dwell on it, however, as they must regroup quickly to take on the Aggies, who stifled Auburn in their league opener but are hoping to show more pop from the offense. A&M QB Marcel Reed will look to get big-play WRs Mario Craver and K.C. Concepcion involved quickly. The Miss. State defense relies on safety help from Isaac Smith and Jahron Manning limiting such explosive plays. Bulldogs QB Blake Shapen has weapons of his own in WRs Brenen Thompson and Anthony Evans, but Aggies DE Cashius Howell could keep him from finding them.

Why it could disappoint: Mississippi State has made huge strides on the offensive side of the ball this season, but the Aggies defense might prove harder to solve. It would take only moderate improvement on a surprisingly low 30.61% third-down conversion rate for A&M to establish game control.

Boise State at No. 21 Notre Dame

Time/TV: 3:30 p.m. ET, NBC.

Why watch: This pairing of Playoff teams from a season ago lost a bit of its luster with both squads off to subpar starts in 2025. Both now enter on winning streaks, though none of their combined five victories can be considered needle movers. The Boise offense has been more reliant this year on QB Maddux Madsen, whose passing can be streaky. When he's on target, WRs Latrell Caples and Chris Marshall are valuable downfield weapons, so Notre Dame DBs Jalen Stroman and Adon Shuler must minimize the big plays. Fighting Irish QB C.J. Carr is completing 68.3% of his passes, though the offense works best when RBs Jeremiyah Love and Jadarrian Price are involved. They'll become well acquainted with Broncos DB Ty Benefield and LB Marco Notarainni.

Why it could disappoint: The Broncos have undoubtedly worked out a few issues since getting blown out at South Florida, but this is a major step up in competition. The Fighting Irish have also found their identity and could take immediate charge here.

PGA TOUR

Players admire Southern hospitality

Tia Reid and Michael Chavez
The Mississippi Clarion-Ledger

JACKSON, MS – Mississippi has held a PGA Tour golf tournament since 1968, but that may soon come to an end after Sanderson Farms announced it will not renew the sponsorship for next year.

Many players who have played at the Country Club of Jackson or Annandale have enjoyed their time in the Magnolia state.

Akshay Bathia, who played in his first PGA Tour event as a pro in 2020 at the Sanderson Farms Championship, said the city of Jackson offers a homey feel, along with the kindness of fans.

"The event and the town feel like a very wholesome family," said the 23-year-old Bhatia, who is playing in his third Sanderson Farms Championship. "Kind of feeling like it doesn't matter who you are, everyone supports everyone, which is really nice and really respectful.

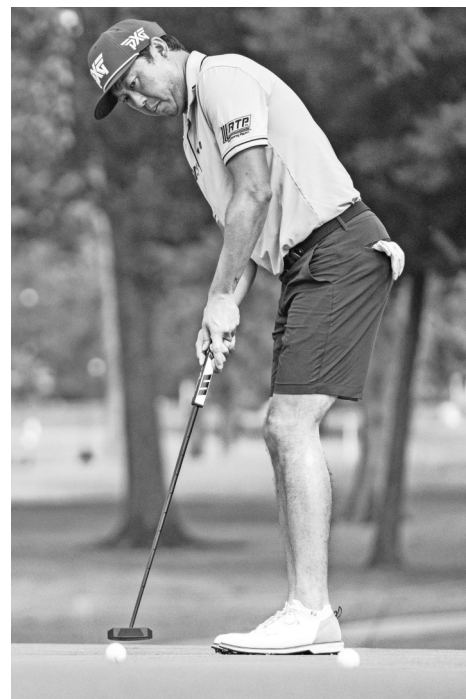

I've always enjoyed it." Brandt Snedeker, who will be making his sixth appearance at the Sanderson Farms Championships, echoed a similar sentiment, likening his time in Jackson to his upbringing in Nashville, Tennessee. "It's fun to be back, and I love being out (here)," Snedeker said. "Growing up in the South, getting to play a golf course like this is really, really special." Snedeker also noted the importance of the community turning out for the tournament. "This is a big golfing community, and they come out in full support of us, and it's fun to see," he said. "Coming to markets like this, that they're probably under-served when it comes to professional sports, you can be able to come out here and put a first-class event on is really special." Beau Hossler, the 2024 runner-up, also had complimentary things to say about the "Southern hospitality" offered to PGA Tour pros. And that doesn't include the beautiful weather, a nice golf course and a good coffee shop at Native Coffee Co. in Belhaven.

"Steve Jent does an amazing job with this tournament as the tournament director," Hossler said. "They've really laid it all out for the players and the caddies. (They) treat us amazing. The hospitality here is off the charts. It's a great golf course for us. ... I think pretty much everyone who plays it will give you positive reviews on it."

Davis Riley, who is from Hattiesburg, believes hosting a PGA Tour event in the state is great for expanding the game, and being able to see family is a bonus for him.

"It's nice that we have a couple Mississippi guys out here," Riley said. "I know they're in the same boat and want to win this tournament just as bad as I do. It's nice to have an event here and represent."
